

Because the recycled wood and plastic fibers in Trex composites can absorb the color pigments differently, you may see a color variation between various pieces of materials. You may also find that color variation in posts, rails and pickets may be more pronounced due to the thickness of the materials and the different lot codes. To make this variation less noticeable, group similar color shades together in a section of fence. The natural weathering process over time will also help to minimize this contrast.

Incorrect

Correct

